1. Communist authorities in Peiping have been worried over the signing of the Japanese Peace Treaty, believing that the United Nations, under American leadership, will take further collective measures in Asia. This they interpret as the "sign of a great war in Asia".
2. The treaty signing, failure of the Korean cease-fire talks, and Soviet orders for aid to Indochina and Korea have caused gloom in the Peiping administration. This is further evidenced by despondency on the part of MAO Tse-tung and the fact that he has talked little in recent months. Confidence of the middle and low-ranking Communists has been shaken, but the international clique, under LIU Shao-ch'i, still adheres to international policies. LIU and KAO Kang are the only active Communist officials now in Peiping.
3. Recently MAO called three secret meetings of high-ranking military, political, and Communist party officials to attempt to reach a policy decision concerning the above situation. The following decisions were made:

b. To advise and intensify military, political, and economic policies in China, in order to match the highest standards of the new plan or policy.
